Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Clara Novello s Reminiscences: Compiled by the Daughter Contessa Valeria Gigliucci, With a Memoir Clara Anastasia Novello was born in England, June 10, 1818, and died at Rome, March 12, 1908. At the early age of eleven she became a pupil at the Institution Royale de Musique classique et religieuse in Paris, of which Choron was the director. But before that time, her father - a gifted musician - had accustomed her to sing Handel s and Mozart s music, whilst still holding her doll in her arms, so that on the trial day, the French examiners found that the English child was a very exceptional student, and abnormally gifted with a silvery, bell-like, clear and ringing voice, which, after studious cultivation, became a fixture and a life-long possession. The Revolution of 1830 prematurely shortened the studies in Paris, and Clara, before her teens, returned home and appeared in public a year or two afterwards. Her first appearance was at a concert in the Windsor theatre, where the King s private band gratuitously assisted for a charitable object. A young Italian happened to be present, and ventured on printing two poor lines, which anyhow had some prophetic truth in them: Canta bene quest uccello Dolce rossignuol - Novello.
