BISHOP. iliNGAGED in superintending the publication of my deceased friends Poetical Works, I conceive that the interest excited by the writings, will be extended to the author; and that the world will desire some information concerning the person, whose very productions prove him to have been distinguished by uncommon mental endowments. The trite observation, that the lives of literary men are deficient in incidents to gratify curiosity, could never be more justly applied, than on the present occasion. Nothing to attract the attention, or to amuse the imagination, can be expected in the memoirs of a writer, who published no work of importance; took no active part in public concerns; S was engaged in no controversy, nor involved in anypersonal dispute; whose days were rendered remarkable by no signal instance of either good or bad fortune; and whose whole life was passed in one even and uniform tenor, --and almost upon one spot, -- where he instructed youth in his school, and cultivated literature in the retirement of his closet. Yet those short notices, which my recollection preserves, or my inquiry has been able to obtain, concerning an author, whose works will probably descend to posterity, I ought not to withhold from the public, who will read his compositions with increased satisfaction, when they shall know that the amiable qualities of his disposition were not inferior to the vigorous powers of his understanding. However conscious I may be of my own disqualification for the...
